Who is Shirley Husar?

For many across the United States, she is a delegate for the California Republican Party and a Republican strategist for years. She is an outspoken Republican personality, nationally known for her work as a talk-show host and Republican supporter.

She is a conservative leader that understands that the Republican Party of 2010 that understands the need to have a new connectivity and relationship model in place between Republican candidates and voters within California's urban communities. Shirley understands that Los Angeles County political leaders (including statewide candidates) must pursue developmental or economically advantageous policies such as economic development initiatives fiscally beneficial policies that will help the residents with long-term solutions that they can support.

As a proud Republican, Shirley can also relate to the similar issues and bonds with minority communities that many California Republicans are current shut out from. She worked on Julian Dixon campaigns in 1970'. The experiences that cemented her Republican roots.

As a delegate for the California Republican Party, she believes that America has prospered under the two-party system because one party has always served to check the excesses of the other. Often, both parties agree on the problems, but do not agree on the solutions. To her, Republicans believe that the solution to American's problems lies in the greatness of the American people. With its message of economic growth and opportunity, the GOP is the natural champion of blacks, minorities, women and ethnic Americans. Shirley Husar is a natural leader to help deliver that message to voters in 2010.
